Treating your scars

Caesarean Sections may leave nasty scarring which may bother new Moms. Although there is no permanent solution, one can reduce the width, depth and appearance of the scar by using Celltone Tissue Oil.

There are two types of scarring:

Keloids which is a scar that tends to get worse over time and rise above the skin. Normally appears following surgery or injury.

Hypertrophic Scars are characterised by deposits of excessive amounts of collagen which result in a red raised scar that can sometimes be itchy and painful.
